71.—(1) A court which makes a preservation order—

(a) may, on application by a person affected by that order, vary or rescind the preservation order or an order authorizing the seizure of the property concerned or other ancillary order, if it is satisfied—

(i) that the operation of the order concerned will deprive the applicant of the means to provide for his reasonable living expenses and cause undue hardship for the applicant;

(ii) that the hardship that the applicant will suffer as a result of the order outweighs the risk that the property concerned may be destroyed, lost, damaged, concealed or transferred; and

(b) shall rescind the preservation order when the criminal proceedings against the defendant concerned are concluded.

(2) When a court orders the rescission of an order authorizing the seizure of property under paragraph (a) of subsection (1), the court shall make such other order as it considers appropriate for the proper, fair and effective execution of the preservation order concerned.

(3) The absence of a person whose interest in property may be affected by a forfeiture order does not prevent the court from making the order.

(4) The validity of an order under subsection (1) is not affected by the outcome of criminal proceedings, or of an investigation with a view to institute the proceedings, in respect of an offence with which the property concerned is in some way associated.

(5) The competent authority applying for a forfeiture order shall publish a notice thereof in the Gazette or two newspapers of widest circulation in Malawi as soon as practicable but not more than thirty days after the order is made.

the court shall make an order declaring the nature, extent and value (at the time the order was made) of the person's interest.

(2) Subject to subsection (3), where a forfeiture order has already been made directing the forfeiture of property, a person who claims an interest in the property may, before the end of the period of twelve months commencing on the day on which the forfeiture order is made, apply under this subsection to the court for an order under subsection (1).

(a) neither knew nor had reasonable grounds to suspect that the property in which the interest is held has been used or is intended for use in the commission of an offence; or

(b) where the offence concerned had occurred before the commencement of this Act, the applicant has since the commencement of this Act taken all reasonable steps to prevent the use of the property concerned in connection with the commission of an offence.

(6) The court making an order for the exclusion of an interest in property under subsection (1) may, in the interest of the administration of justice or in the public interest, make that order upon the conditions that the court deems appropriate, including a condition requiring the person who applied for the exclusion to take all reasonable steps, within a period that the court may determine, to prevent the future use of the property in connection with the commission of an offence.

Rules of
benefit and assessing value

86.—(1) Where a person obtains property as the result of, or in connection with, the commission of an offence under this Act, his benefit is the value of the property so obtained.

(2) Where a person derived an advantage as a result of, or in connection with, the commission of an offence under this act, his advantage shall be deemed to be a sum of money equal to the value of the advantage so derived.

(3) In determining whether a person has benefited from the commission of an offence under this act or from the offence taken together with another offence, the court shall, unless the contrary is proved, deem—

(a) all property appearing to the court to be held by the person, on the day on which the application is made, to be property that came into the possession or under the control of the person by the reason of the commission of that offence or other serious offences for which the person was convicted; and

(b) any property received or deemed to have been received by the person at any time as a result of, or in connection with the commission by him of that offence or those offences as property received by him free of any interest therein.

(4) where a pecuniary penalty order has been previously made against a person, in assessing the value of any benefit derived by him from the commission of the offence, the court shall leave out of account any of the benefits that are shown to the court to have been taken into account in determining the amount to be recovered under that order.

(5) If evidence is given at the hearing of the application that the value of the property of a person at any time after the commission of an offence under this Act exceeded the value of the property of that person before the commission of the offence, then the court shall, subject to subsection (6), treat the value of the benefit as being not less than the amount of that excess.

(6) If, after evidence of the kind referred to in subsection (5) is given, the person satisfies the court that the whole or part of the excess of the value of property was due to causes unrelated to the commission of an offence under this act, subsection (5) does not apply to the excess or, as the case may be, that part.

87.—(1) Where—

(a) a person has been convicted of an offence and the competent authority tenders to the court a statement as to any matters relevant to—

(i) determine whether the person has benefited from the offence or from any other offence of which he is convicted in the same proceedings or which is taken into account in determining his or her sentence; or

(b) the person accepts to any extent an allegation in the statement referred to in paragraph (a), the court may, for the purposes of so determining or making that assessment, treat his acceptance as conclusive of the matters to which it relates.

(2) Where—

(a) a statement is tendered under subsection (1) (a); and

(b) the court is satisfied that a copy of that statement has been served on the person, the court may require the person to indicate to what extent he accepts each allegation in the statement and so far as he does not accept any allegation, to indicate any matters he proposes to rely on.

(3) Where the person fails in any respect to comply with a requirement under subsection (2), he may be treated for the purposes of this section as having accepted every allegation in the statement other than—

(a) an allegation in respect of which he complied with the requirement; and

(b) an allegation that he has benefited from the offence or that any property or advantage was obtained by him as a result of or in connection with the commission of the offence.

(4) Where—

(a) the person tenders to the court a statement as to any matters relevant to determining the amount that might be realized at the time the pecuniary penalty order is made; and

(b) the competent authority accepts, to any extent, any allegation in the statement, the court may, for the purposes of that determination, treat the acceptance of the competent authority as conclusive of the matters to which it relates.

(5) An allegation may be accepted or a matter indicated for the purposes of this section either—

(a) orally before the court; or

(b) in writing in accordance with rules of court.

(6) An acceptance by a person under this section that he received any benefit from the commission of an offence is admissible in proceedings for any offence.

88.—(1) Subject to subsection (2), the amount to be recovered from a person under a pecuniary penalty order shall be the amount which the court assesses to be the value of the benefit of the person from an offence, or if more than one, all the offences in respect of which the order may be made.

Amount recovered under pecuniary penalty order

(2) Where the court is satisfied as to any matter relevant for determining the amount which might be realized at the time, the pecuniary penalty order is made, whether by acceptance under section 87 or otherwise, the court may issue a certificate giving its opinion as to the matters concerned, and shall do so, if satisfied that the amount that might be realized at the time the pecuniary penalty order is made is less than the amount it assesses to be the value of the benefit of the person from the offence, or if more than one, all the offences in respect of which the pecuniary penalty order may be made.

89. Where—

(a) the court makes a pecuniary penalty order against a person in relation to an offence under this Act;

(b) in calculating the amount of the pecuniary penalty order, the court took into account a confiscation order of the property or proposed confiscation order in respect of property; and

(c) an appeal against confiscation or a confiscation order is allowed or the proceedings from the proposed confiscation order terminate without the proposed confiscation order being made, a competent authority may apply to court for variation of the pecuniary penalty order to increase the amount of the order by the value of the property not so confiscated and the court may, if it considers it appropriate to do so, vary the order accordingly.

Variation of pecuniary penalty order

(3) Where the court, for the purposes of making a pecuniary order against a person, treats particular property as the property of a person pursuant to subsection (1), the court may, on application by the competent authority make an order declaring that the property is available to satisfy the order.

(4) Where, under subsection (3), the court declares that property is available to satisfy a pecuniary penalty order—

(a) the order may be enforced against the property as if the property were the property of the person against whom the order is made; and

(b) a restraining order may be made in respect of the property as if the property were property of the person against whom the order is made.

(5) Where the competent authority makes an application for an order under subsection (3) that property is available to satisfy a pecuniary penalty order against a person—

(a) the competent authority shall give written notice of the application to the person and to any person who the competent authority has reason to believe may have an interest in the property; and
